

ABSTRACT

A metal-based fuel cell in which a flow path delivers a flow of reaction solution through a particulate anode and one or more particle releasers are situated along the flow path and configured to release from the cell particles which are prone to clogging due to 5 reductions in size caused by anodic dissolution.

U.S. PATENT AND TRADEMARK OFFICE